

PZ Insider Report - BREAKING NEWS - Ebola NOW in Texas

June 3, 2019

Ebola has hit Texas thanks to our open borders.

Right now, there are 9 and possibly up to 15 people sitting on the US/ Mexico border in quarantine who are from Congo, Africa.

Those are the people that they caught, what if there are others that got through?

The Ebola outbreak that is taking place right now is the largest outbreak in known history and has been going on since 2014.

Past Ebola outbreaks were not as devastating and the current outbreak. I believe that is because this strain of Ebola has mutated in one form or another like many immunosuppressive diseases do over time.

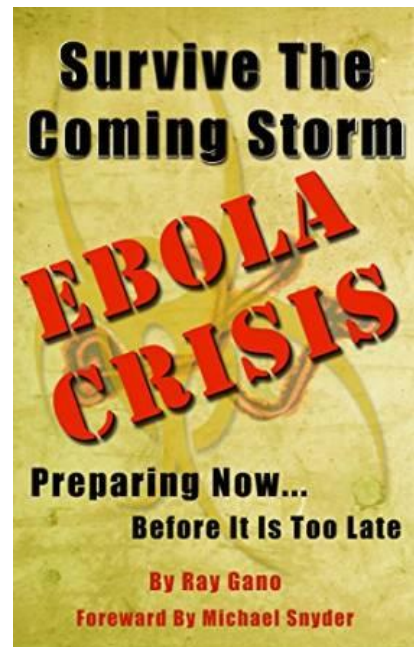

Because our world has gotten smaller due to jet planes flying all over the world, the probability of a virus crossing over into other countries has become much easier.

As with past outbreaks of Ebola, this strain is showing that the virus can live outside the body for up to 10 hours, which increases the ability to infect people. A victim who is carrying the virus could be walking around in an airport can cough, sneeze, spit, vomit and the virus cells will remain active for up to 10 hours on whatever surface they landed on.

That is 10 hours that tens if not hundreds of people could come in contact with those virus cells. Once the person comes in contact with those cells, all they would need to do is touch their mouth, their eye, scratch an open sore and that person is infected.

The key to living through this is prevention.

Once a family member contracts this horrible disease the outcome is pretty grim. Studies show that there is a 40% chance of survival where 60% of those who contract the disease will die.

If people are going to truly make it, they will need to self-quarantine and if one does not have enough food, water and other items to ride this storm out, they will have to go out into the public more and more and that is exactly where you do not want to be. To go out into the public means that you will be exposing yourself to Ebola and the person leaving will have increased risk in contracting the disease.

With that, I am honored to present the following articles in this issue of The PZ Insider Report.

BREAKING NEWS - Ebola NOW in Texas - By Ray Gano

Winds of prophecy breeze across the Trump peace plan - By Bill Wilson

American Soil Is Being Globalized: 30 Million Acres Of Farmland Foreign Owned - By Michael Snyder

The Party of Death - By Coach Dave Daubenmire

Corporate America Joins LGBT Indoctrination Bandwagon - By Kade Hawkins

Seeking Advertisers & Sponsors

Folks, things are starting to really pick up here at raygano.net. We just added another 1500 people to our mailing list.

Because we are expanding our business / ministry to "Teach The People," It seems that we have touched a much needed cord and MANY people have responded.

Already we have had to increase our email capabilities from $29 a month to their third starter tier of $59 a month.

Tracye and I are trying to produce at least 2 informative videos a week, if not more, and we are still sending out our PZ Insider Report every Monday.

OH... and our PZ Files Area. I continue to add to this and if you are a PZ Insider, you gain access to this growing library of preparedness & survival as well as other very informative files, such as my beginner keto recipes that I have re-purposed myself.

So, we have a lot going on and we are growing.

Now here is the problem, we need financial support in the form of new PZ Insiders as well as taking on advertisers.

Already I am getting emails from Go-Daddy that we are going to have to upgrade our server service. Our site is starting to see some solid traffic and we do not want slow servers.

Also we are considering doing some advertising on Facebook and other social media platforms to help spread the word even more that we are here to stay and will work hard to keep you informed.

ADVERTISER INFO

When I publish one of my articles, I send it out to over 7600+ people and growing. We added another 400 people to our list this week.

On top of that several websites pick up my articles, like stevequayle.com and beforeitsnews.com

I link in banner ads on my articles so that there is solid exposure to those who are supporting our work via advertising.

On top of all that, I push my work out to a number of large Facebook groups as well as other social media outlets.

All in all I our work is exposed to well over 70K+ people every time I push out one of my articles.

Do you have a business that we can promote?

Tracye and I are creating more video content and we want to insert advertisements for businesses that are supporting our work.

We also want to put your banner add on our website and in our emails.

As an introduction, we are being very competitive, so if you are interested, contact me – ray@raygano.net and help sponsor our work and allow us to promote your business.

BREAKING NEWS - Ebola is NOW in Texas

By Ray Gano

My name is Ray Gano; I am a prepper and have been a prepper pretty much all my life. My mother was raised during the great depression, and because of that she was always a frugal person. She would can up and dehydrate food, always setting it aside for “a rainy day.” One of my most vivid memories growing up was during the economic recession we had in the mid-1960s. Life for us was pretty hard. I remember us going behind grocery stores and picking out old fruit and vegetables. We would pick mustard greens, black berries, crab apples, anything that was growing on the side of the road we would stop and pick it. There was a butcher in town that used to save beef bones for us, and my mom would gather us around the stove and make “nail soup.”

Nail soup was a big deal back then. We all helped clean up the old vegetables, cut away bad pieces and keep the good parts. Mom would then have us carefully put the veggies we cut up into the pot. Finally, she would pick on of us kids to take the magic nail from the windowsill and put it in the pot. See, the nail was magic and that is what made the “Nail Soup” tastes so good. The real ingredient was the best of all; it was my mother’s love.

Another point when I was growing up was when my father contracted Hong Kong Flu. This was around the same time in the mid to late 1960’s. I remember my mom quarantining the room and keeping us kids away. Only she could go into the room and she worked hard to keep the house sterile and germ free.

Many people died from the Hong Kong Flu, which come to find out was a strain of H1N1 Spanish Flu. The same H1N1 that we still have today that many believe will eventually mutate again, into a more harmful form of H1N1.

Over the years I was drawn to home remedies, and back woods cures. I started to learn about all the edible plants in our area and also learned how to use them medically. As time went on I would buy books on the different plant always trying to increase my knowledge.

When I went into the army, I would always try to learn the different plants in the area and in Germany I was learning the flora and fauna that was offered there. In fact, when I was in Germany I would teach the men under my command how to use the different plants and such if they were put in the position to have to live off the land.

Once I got out of the army, I still maintained my interest in learning how to live off the land and also, the medicinal uses many plants had.

Fast forward to today and with the outrageous cost of medical treatment, I became our family’s first line medical care giver.

I started to expand learning about all of the natural herb, vitamins and other supplements that are out there.

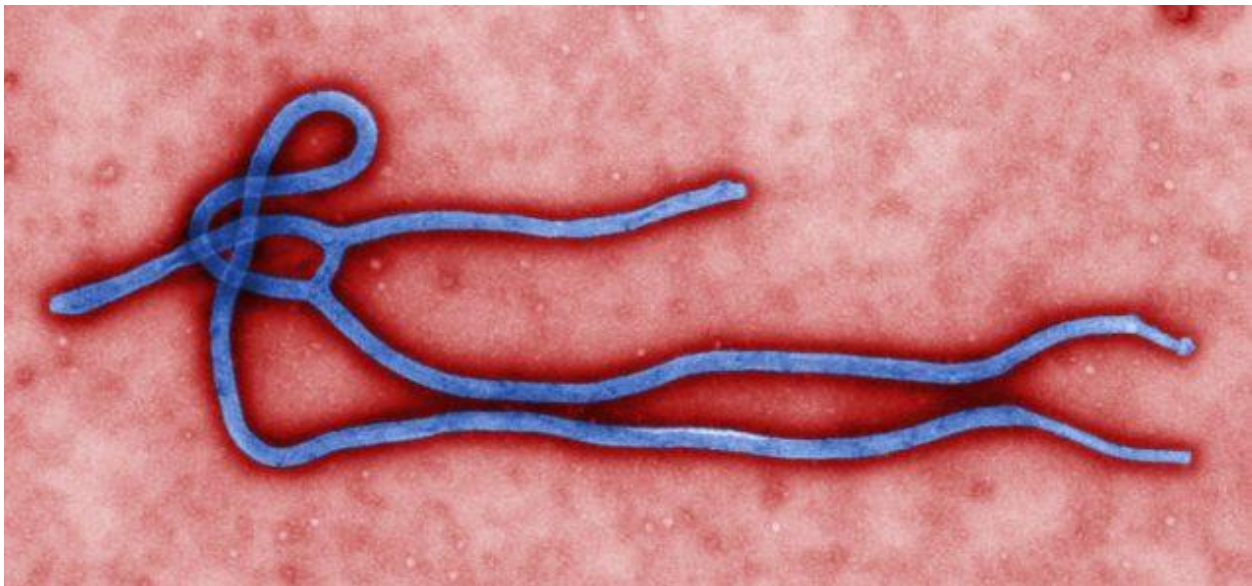

Nurse Amy of “Doc Bones & Nurse Amy” introduced me to essential oils and I started learning more on how to use these effectively, in conjunction with my herbal cures.

Back in 2005 I diagnosed my son’s Type 1 Diabetes. Ever article, book and website that I was reading pointed to T1 but did not believe it till I finally told Tracye that we needed to get him to the hospital. From what I could tell he was already in the very dangerous stages of diabetic ketoacidosis.

We got him to the emergency room, I told the nurses what I suspected, and they congratulated me on catching it. They said that they see many first time T1 kids already passed out due to DKA.

I want to say that I am not a doctor and I have nothing but the highest respect for doctors. All the things they have to study and to stay up to date. I never thought that I had the calling to be a doctor, but I do enjoy the study of folk medicine and the cures and remedies our great grandparents once used. Many of those cures and remedies are making a comeback today. I think it is very prudent that those of us who are preppers have as much understanding about medicine as we are able. We need to return to having the skills of mending wounds, binding cuts and giving proper first aid.

I think the skill of diagnosing basic illnesses is also something that has been forgotten. It amazes me how many people do not even know the symptoms of a common cold and then rush to the ER thinking they are about to go to their grave.

I have made it a personal responsibility to be the best care giver that I could for the sake of my family.

To this date, whenever we are with our kids and grandkids, I am always asked to look at some cut or scratch or help diagnose some belly rumblings, fever or runny nose. In fact, my Grandson thinks that if I do not have my flashlight in hand when looking at that splinter, then something must be wrong. No matter what the little prick or scratch, I must look at it with my flashlight so that I can make the proper diagnosis and provide him the proper treatment.

Most times it all comes down to a little Neosporin and Band-Aid. Sometimes I will use lavender oil or thieves' oil just to help it speed the healing. My grandson likes it because it smells good and is "good medicine" not the bad medicine that "tastes yucky".

Today we have Ebola that is trying to break free from the borders of Africa and getting to the point where it is becoming impossible to contain.

I think back when I was watching Fox News reporting on Dr. Brantly, who has just arrived in the US at the university hospital outside of Atlanta.

Dr. Kent Brantly, who is believed to be the first patient with the deadly virus ever to be treated at a hospital in the United States, landed at Dobbins Air Reserve Base around 11 a.m. August 2nd 2014.

The Ebola outbreak that is taking place right now is the largest outbreak in known history and has been going on since 2014.

Past Ebola outbreaks were not as devastating and the current outbreak. I believe that is because this strain of Ebola has mutated in one form or another like many immunosuppressive diseases do over time.

Because our world has gotten smaller due to jet planes flying all over the world, the probability of a virus crossing over into other countries has become much easier.

As with past outbreaks of Ebola, this strain is showing that the virus can live outside the body for up to 10 hours, which increases the ability to infect people. A victim who is carrying the virus could be walking around in an airport can cough, sneeze, spit, vomit and the virus cells will remain active for up to 10 hours on whatever surface they landed on.

That is 10 hours that tens if not hundreds of people could come in contact with those virus cells. Once the person comes in contact with those cells, all they would need to do is touch their mouth, their eye, scratch an open sore and that person is infected.

The key to living through this is prevention.

Once a family member contracts this horrible disease the outcome is pretty grim. Studies show that there is a 40% chance of survival where 60% of those who contract the disease will die. If you have not done so, I HIGHLY RECOMMEND that you read my first book, "Survive The Coming Storm – The Value of a Preparedness Lifestyle."

If people are going to truly make it, they will need to self-quarantine and if one does not have enough food, water and other items to ride this storm out, they will have to go out into the public more and more and that is exactly where you do not want to be. To go out into the public means that you will be exposing yourself to Ebola and the person leaving will have increased risk in contracting the disease.

This is why I wrote my second book “Survive The Coming Storm – Ebola Crisis – Preparing Now Before It is To Late” which is still a “best seller” in the medical book and nursing categories.

In this book I make MANY recommendations from herbal supplements to OTC medicines. I also make recommendations on getting Hazmat Suits, facemasks, and rubber gloves. At a minimum having a N95 facemask will be a necessity along with bottles of Purell to constantly keeping your hands sterile. On top of that all of us will have to break that horrible habit of touching our face, eyes, nose or mouth. Do that during a pandemic and you sign your own death sentence.

If you and your family are not prepared by then, odds are increased in contracting the deadly Ebola virus. If you are only able to give subpar care to that infected family member, they will probably die and odds are good that others, including yourself will probably catch the disease.

It is my hope that this book helps you and equips you with information that will help you prepare NOW instead of waiting till the pandemic starts.

You still have time, do what you have to do and even if nothing happens, you have gained valuable supplies that most likely will be needed.

Every 100 years our world suffers a deadly global pandemic. The last killer was the Spanish flu in 1918. In 2018 it will be 100 years from that last deadly pandemic. This makes the odds extremely high that a killer pandemic is just around the next corner.

Ebola is Now Here in Texas

There is a serious Ebola alert in Laredo Texas after 3 illegals from the Congo crossed over into US Territory.

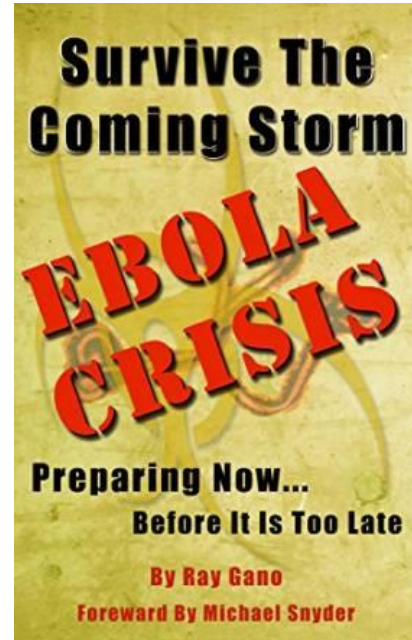

There are also 6 in custody in Laredo Mexico and what appears to be another 6 in Juarz as well.

This is 9 people confirmed with a possibility of 15 people total from the Congo who have contracted the Ebola virus.

This is serious.

How many people did these 9/15 people come in contact with?

Is it possible that there are now people in the US that came over the border illegally and are carriers of Ebola?

If so, then how many people have they come in contact with and then those people come in contact with others.

Can you see how fast this could turn into an epidemic?

On Friday, ABC News reported that the World Health Organization is claiming the Ebola outbreak in the Congo is of “deep concern,” while stopping short of declaring it a global emergency.

Following a meeting of its expert committee, the U.N. health agency called for efforts to be redoubled to stop the deadly virus, noting that the recent spike in Ebola cases raises the risk of spread to other countries.

A public health official in Laredo, Texas, said 20 Congolese migrants were monitored for Ebola and other diseases in shelters in his city and across the Mexican border in Nuevo Laredo, Tamaulipas.

“We have 8 Congolese right now in one of our shelters and a dozen in Nuevo Laredo,” Laredo Health Director Dr. Hector Gonzalez told the Laredo City Councilman George Altget during a council meeting on April 4.

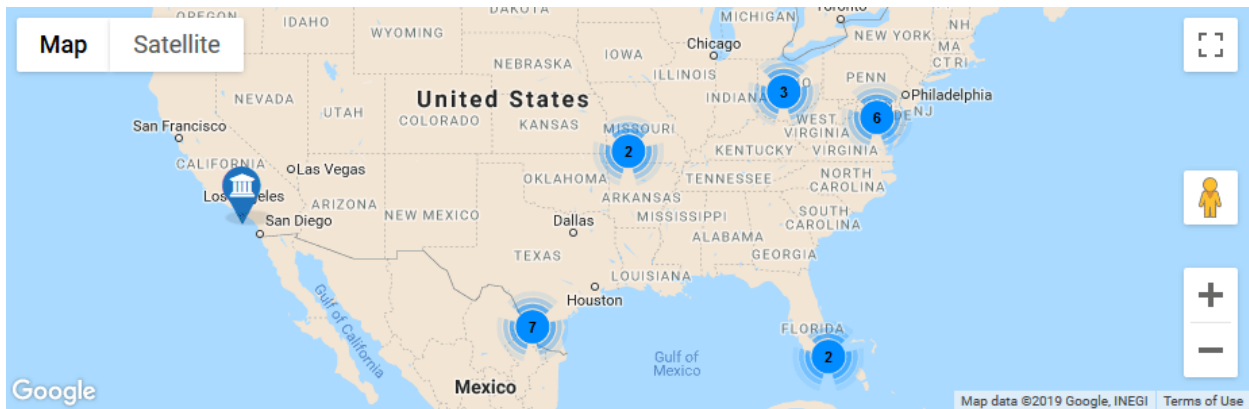

So you can see my concern. How many people did these people come in contact with once they arrived in Central America?

In fact, where did they land? Did they land in Mexico from the Congo? Maybe Belize, Guatemala, Honduras?

If they landed in one of those countries, then they had plenty of chances to come in contact with a lot of people as well as people who were also crossing the border illegally.

Now, how many Congolese individuals did not get captured and are possibly here in Texas or have moved further up north to escape detection?

Again, we may be looking at a serious epidemic / pandemic.

Latest data indicates a total of 1,206 confirmed and probable cases of Ebola in this latest deadly outbreak in Congo which began last August, while 764 people have died up to last Wednesday, making the outbreak – which is endemic in the Congo – the worst in the country’s history. The numbers spiked this week, with 20 new cases on Wednesday alone.

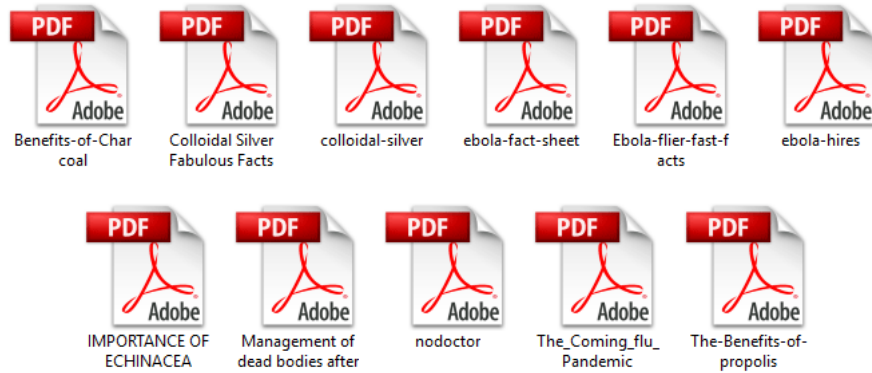

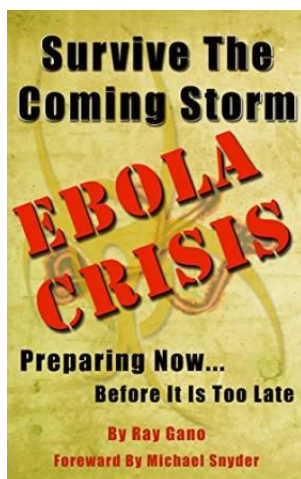

The concern for health officials is that Congo is right in the heart of Central Africa and has borders with a large number of countries: Angola, Kenya, Zambia, Gabon, Nigeria, Ethiopia, Rwanda, Tanzania, Sudan, Burundi and Uganda.

What To Do?

As you know, I wrote my preventative book about battling Ebola and you can battle it if you are prepared.

The key is being prepared NOW and not wait.

I have pulled together 10 PDFs that I will give you FOR FREE when you purchase my ebola book (in PDF format) for only $25.00

You can go to Amazon and get a hard copy for $25 as well, but you will miss out on these 10 incredible PDFs that will not only help you prepare for an Ebola outbreak, but also for flu pandemic as well as important natural supplements that we can take to help boost our immune system.

All I am asking is $25, but if you would like to donate more, it would help. Tracye and I still have a shortfall to make up, so not only are you helping yourself, but helping us further our ministry and keeping people like yourself informed.

ORDER NOW With Your Gift of $25 + And I Will Email You The Special Ebola Offer

<https://tinyurl.com/Stand-In-The-Gap>

Please share this information with friend and family, it might save their lives if there is a outbreak.

Winds of prophecy breeze across the Trump peace plan

By Bill Wilson

The Trump Middle East peace plan is being panned by the Palestinian leadership before it is even announced. Reuters claims to have spoken to "three Arab officials briefed on the plan," who say if the plan is enacted, it will be the end of the Palestinian cause. One Arab official told Reuters, "What we're seeing from the plan is that it will blow up the Palestinians. The plan doesn't give justice to the Palestinians."

Another senior Palestinian leader told Reuters, "The Palestinian cause is being liquidated--no Jerusalem (as capital), no right of return for refugees, no sovereign state. That is why this American project is dangerous." Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas has already rejected the plan.

The Palestinian side is refusing to participate in the "Peace for Prosperity" economic workshop in Bahrain.

The workshop is the first part of the Administration's peace plan aimed at facilitating "discussions on an ambitious, achievable vision and framework for a prosperous future for the Palestinian people and the region, including enhancements to economic governance, development of human capital, and facilitation of rapid private-sector growth."

The Arab officials told Reuters that if the politics keep failing, the reasoning seems to be, then try dangling tens of billions of dollars before the Palestinians and Israel's Arab neighbors--and do a deal that could unlock prosperity for the Palestinians and security for Israel.

Reuters reports that Palestinian officials briefed on the plan say the deal envisages an expansion of Gaza into part of northern Egypt, under Egyptian control, leaving the Palestinians with a smaller share of the West Bank and some areas on the outskirts of Jerusalem and no control over their borders.

Reuters says Western and Arab sources confirmed the outline of the plan but White House Middle East envoy Jason Greenblatt said "rumors" about an expansion into Egypt's Sinai desert were false. He declined to give details of the political plan before it is released. Greenblatt said that the term "two-state solution" would not be used because it lacks detail and nuance, meaning "different things to different people."

Some are hailing the plan as the fulfillment, at least in part, of Biblical prophecy marking the beginning of what is called the tribulation.

Daniel 9 foretells with extraordinary accuracy of the coming Messiah, his death, and his return. The Beast (antichrist) in verse 27, "shall confirm the covenant with many for one week (7 years): and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease..."

This is the peace treaty that begins the seven years of Jacob's troubles, oft referred to as the tribulation. As Isaiah 28:18 says, "And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand."

This is not that peace treaty. It is not between the Beast and Israel, nor does it allow temple sacrifices or meet other criteria found in the scriptures. It may be only a prophetic breeze of a type and shadow of things to come.

American Soil Is Being Globalized: 30 Million Acres Of Farmland Foreign Owned

By Michael Snyder

All across America, U.S. farmland is being gobbled up by foreign interests. So when we refer to "the heartland of America", the truth is that vast stretches of that "heartland" is now owned by foreigners, and most Americans have no idea that this is happening.

These days, a lot of people are warning about the "globalization" of the world economy, but in reality our own soil is rapidly being "globalized".

When farms are locally owned, the revenue that those farms take in tends to stay in local communities. But with foreign-owned farms there is no guarantee that will happen.

And while there is plenty of food to go around this is not a major concern, but what happens when a food crisis erupts and these foreign-owned farms just keep sending their produce out of the country?

There are some very serious national security concerns here, and they really aren't being addressed. Instead, the amount of farmland owned by foreigners just continues to increase with each passing year.

Prior to seeing the headline to this article, how much U.S. farmland would you have guessed that foreigners now own?

Personally, I had no idea that foreigners now own nearly 30 million acres. The following comes from NPR...

American soil.

Those are two words that are commonly used to stir up patriotic feelings. They are also words that can't be taken for granted, because today nearly 30 million acres of U.S. farmland are held by foreign investors. That number has doubled in the past two decades, which is raising alarm bells in farming communities.

How did we allow this to happen?

And actually laws regarding land ownership vary greatly from state to state. Some states have placed strict restrictions on foreign land ownership, while in other states it is "a free-for-all"...

"Texas is kind of a free-for-all, so they don't have a limit on how much land can be owned," says Ohio Farm Bureau's Ty Higgins, "You look at Iowa and they restrict it -- no land in Iowa is owned by a foreign entity."

Ohio, like Texas, also has no restrictions, and nearly half a million acres of prime farmland are held by foreign-owned entities. In the northwestern corner of the state, below Toledo, companies from the Netherlands alone have purchased 64,000 acres for wind farms.

But even in states where there are restrictions, foreign entities can get around that by simply buying large corporations that own land.

For example, when the Chinese purchased Smithfield Foods in 2013 they instantly gained control over 146,000 acres of prime farmland. The following comes from Wikipedia...

Smithfield Foods, Inc., is a meat-processing company based in Smithfield, Virginia, in the United States, and a wholly owned subsidiary of WH Group of China. Founded in 1936 as the Smithfield Packing Company by Joseph W. Luter and his son, the company is the largest pig and pork producer in the world.

In addition to owning over 500 farms in the US, Smithfield contracts with another 2,000 independent farms around the country to grow Smithfield's pigs.

Outside the US, the company has facilities in Mexico, Poland, Romania, Germany, and the United Kingdom. Globally the company employed 50,200 in 2016 and reported an annual revenue of $14 billion. Its 973,000-square-foot meat-processing plant in Tar Heel, North Carolina, was said in 2000 to be the world's largest, processing 32,000 pigs a day.

Then known as Shuanghui Group, WH Group purchased Smithfield Foods in 2013 for $4.72 billion, more than its market value. It was the largest Chinese acquisition of an American company to date.[10] The acquisition of Smithfield's 146,000 acres of land made WH Group, headquartered in Luohe, Henan province, one of the largest overseas owners of American farmland.

Of course, this hasn't happened by accident.

The communist Chinese government has actually made the purchase of foreign agricultural assets a top national priority in recent years, and this has been reflected in a series of key documents...

The strategy is reflected in encouragements to invest abroad by various documents and articles issued by Chinese leaders. For example, a series of annual "Number one documents" from China's communist party authorities stating rural policy have contained increasingly specific strategies for investment.

A general exhortation to invest in agriculture overseas, issued in 2007, was followed by an initial surge in overseas farming ventures. In 2010, authorities called for supportive policies to encourage investment abroad.

The 2014 document included a more specific mandate to create large grain-trading conglomerates, designed to give Chinese companies greater control over oilseed and grain imports. That was the same year COFCO acquired Nidera and Noble Agri, making COFCO one of the largest trading companies in the world based on value of assets.

The 2015 document specifically called for policies to support facilities, equipment, and inputs for agricultural production in foreign countries. The 2017 document broadened the encouragement to include all types of agricultural conglomerates. The 2018 document repeated the general endorsement of overseas investment and instructions to create multinational grain-trading and agricultural conglomerates.

In the end, how much Chinese ownership of our farmland would we be comfortable with?

If they owned 20 percent of our farmland, would we be okay with that?

Well, what if that figure surged to 30 or 40 percent?

Would that still be okay?

We need to start asking these sorts of questions, because foreigners are buying up more of our farmland with each passing day, and this is a very real national security threat.

And after this absolutely disastrous year, thousands more U.S. farmers will be forced out of business and it is anticipated that more U.S. farmland will be up for sale than ever before.

I extensively discussed the problems that farmers in the middle of the country are currently having yesterday, and today I would like to share with you a portion of an email that a friend in Missouri just sent me...

I work for a farmer in West-Central Missouri who raises corn, soybeans, and cattle and to say it's been a challenging Spring would be the understatement of the year!!! We managed to get some corn planted in April but it started to rain and rain and rain and we still have more corn to plant.

My boss doesn't like to plant corn after May 15 and here it is May 27 and we still are not done planting corn. With each late day that passes by the yield goes down so what do you do??? Do we start planting soybeans if or when it dries up even though the price of soybeans is at a record low or do we plant corn that has risen in price but will have a reduced yield???

From April 28 through today (May 27) we have had 10 inches of rain. One day we had 4.5 inches with roads and basements flooded. Last week we had rain 4 out of those 7 days!!! It's raining again today as I write this!!!

We need warm, sunshine, dry, windy days and we get mostly cool, cloudy, rainy days. Next Thursdays low is supposed to be 57!!! If the weather pattern doesn't change I don't see how we can ever get the soybeans planted and we have 1,300 acres to plant. There are large farmers in my area that don't have anything planted.

This truly is a "perfect storm" for U.S. farmers, and many believe that what we have witnessed so far is just the beginning.

Farm bankruptcies are already at the highest level that we have seen since the last recession, and do we really want foreigners gobbling up even more of our farmland from farmers that are incredibly desperate to sell?

Our founders never intended for America to be for sale to the highest bidder, and hopefully more states will start passing laws that will make sure that U.S. farms stay in the hands of U.S. farmers.

The Party of Death

By Coach Dave Daubenmire

Let me say right off the bat that I am not a Republican. Yes, I usually pull the lever for the Elephant in the race, but that does not mean I stand in support of the Republican Party. Voting Republican has not cured the ills in this nation and it took me a long time to realize that there is very little difference between the two parties.

But there is a small difference and there truly is such a thing as the lesser of two evils. Both parties are connected at the top to the Deep State and even though sometimes I think it is useless to vote at all, there is no reason for a Christian to EVER vote for a Democrat.

The Democrat Party is a party that openly supports death. The war-mongering Republicans have blood on their hands as well; as they have never seen a war that they didn't support. But the Democrats' love of death is unabated and unlimited.

The Democrat Party is the party of death, and no amount of "social justice" can override that obvious fact.

The Scriptures tell us that "All they who hate me love death." On every major issue that involves life, the Democrats are on the side of death.

Remember here, I reluctantly vote Republican. I am not a supporter of the Republican Party. But how can any Christian ignore the Democrats affinity for all things that lead to death?

Abortion is numero uno for me. The Democrats openly support death for the unborn child. Although they hide their blood lust behind the euphemism of a phony word called "choice," the Truth is, the choice they support is death. As one who has spent a lot of time outside of abortion clinics, I promise you I have never seen a pro-abortion Democrat support adoption.

Killing the baby is not a "choice", it is murder. The Matron Saint of the Democrat Party, Planned Parenthood, does not actively support adoption because there is too much money to be made off of the bloody backs of the helpless baby. Planned Parenthood floods Democrat coffers with taxpayer money in an attempt to keep baby murder "safe and legal."

Demoncrats support Planned Parenthood and the right to kill babies. Remember, “All they who hate me love death.” In fact, they are actually in support of killing babies AFTER THEY HAVE BEEN BORN.

No Christian could EVER vote for a party that supports abortion.

Homosexuality is a death style. Simply check the statistics. The homosexual lifestyle is a high-risk lifestyle rife with high-risk behaviors. The end result of such unnatural sexual practices is death and destruction, as studies show that the homosexual deathstyle may erase as much as 20 years off of life expectancy. Yet the Demoncratic hacks at the National Education Association (NEA) continue to teach this “alternative lifestyle” to our children.

As if that was not enough, acceptance of pedophilia and bestiality are slowly creeping their way through organizations that support the un-godly Demoncrats. The Demoncrats are hell-bent on dragging our children down the path of destruction.

The Demoncrats also have their steely eyes locked on the elderly and the infirm. Although the infamous Obama Care was crammed up the rear end of Americans with NO REPUBLICAN votes, the reality of “death panels” are playing out all across America. As I write today’s commentary, an elderly woman is being killed in Houston, as the hospital unplugs her ventilator and dialysis machines against the wishes of her family and her husband of 41 years. Read the story HERE. Republican George Bush’s fingerprints are all over this case.

The greatest example of The Party of Death’s hatred of God is their rejection of all things Christian in regards to our oaths of office. Recently, Jarrold Nadler and his gang of ghouls removed “so help me God” when swearing in witnesses before Congress. Catch these dastardly Demoncrats in action HERE.

How can there be so much confusion in the populace? How can nearly 60 percent of Catholics continue to support the Party of Death when the Catholic Church for decades has been one of the greatest proponents of a legacy of life in America? The Catholic Church used to believe that the use of birth control was a sin. Today, they are wavering on abortion. If American Catholics voted what their catechism teaches, abortion, homosexuality, divorce, and euthanasia would come to an end in this nation.

The Demoncrat Party would collapse without the support of “pro-life” Catholics who ignore the life issue and vote based on social justice issues that ignore the plight of the pre-born.

Christians are losing ground in the cultural war because they simply no longer understand what it means to be a Christian.

Would Jesus be in support of abortion? Would Jesus be in support of homosexuality and all of its deviant sexual practices? Would Jesus support the killing of the infirm and the elderly simply because it was costly and inconvenient? Would Jesus support the teaching of deviancy and Godlessness to our nation's youth?

Only a CHINO (Christian In Name Only) could ever vote contrary to the teachings of Jesus. The Republicans aren't much better, I admit. But at least they don't stand in direct opposition to the edicts of Christ.

If you vote for a Democrat, you had better check your theology. God is not a Republican, but I guaran-darn-tee you, He ain't a Democrat. Voting to support a party that specializes in killing the weak and innocent borders on sin.

The Democrat Party is the party of death.

Corporate America Joins LGBT Indoctrination Bandwagon

By Kade Hawkins

As the LGBT movement continues to grow in power and influence, corporate America has made sure to secure a seat on the "love is love" bandwagon by increasing its marketing efforts to show its alignment with this new indoctrination.

The rush of advertising promoting one aspect or another of these alternative lifestyles is almost too numerous to mention, in fact it's hard to find one that has not joined in. Here are a few that have been featured in the press over the last few weeks:

Nabisco

According to Nabisco, there is apparently no difference between a woman who gives birth to children, raises them, nurtures them, clothes them, feeds them, and guides them through life and a man who dresses like a woman and calls himself a "drag momma."

Drag queen and reality TV contestant Jose Cancel dressed as his alter-ego Vanessa VanjieMateoz (Miss Vanjie) told viewers to buy Chips Ahoy! cookies to celebrate Mother's Day.

In his rant, Cancel explains how anyone who feels like it can be a mom. Anyone you consider to be 'like' a mom is, in fact, a mom. And you should buy them some cookies.

"What's a sweet gesture for you to do to your momma? Your real momma, your drag momma, whichever momma, somebody, whoever take care of you, whoever you feel or consider your momma, it's their day today," Cancel says.

When customers complained on Twitter over the ad the snack food giant doubled down and responded by repeatedly mocking, even laughing, at customers who expressed concern.

Gillette:

In a cleverly designed ad that makes it hard to criticize due to its personal nature, Gillette posted the ad titled, "First Shave, the Story of Samson," showcasing trans activist Samson Bonkeabantu Brown shaving for the first time since transitioning from female to male as dad watches and offers advice.

"Whenever, wherever, however it happens - your first shave is special," the video is captioned.

"Growing up, I was always trying to figure out what kind of man I want to become and I'm still trying to figure out what kind that I want to become," Brown says in the video.

As the activist begins to shave, Brown's father advises, "Now don't be scared. Shaving is about being confident. You are doing fine."

"It's not just myself transitioning. It's everyone around me transitioning," Brown adds.

The ad closes with a close-up shot on Brown smiling, with overlaying text reading, "The best a man can get."

Converse:

Converse has announced the release of a new line of shoes celebrating LGBT culture alongside a marketing campaign featuring characters of various sexual orientations, including an 11-year-old 'drag kid' who goes by the stage name 'Desmond Is Amazing'.

Desmond is highlighted on the Converse website wearing a flamboyant outfit and make-up, striking a dramatic dance pose alongside a quote stating, "There is no normal".

Desmond has been at the center of a controversy concerning his public appearances as a child drag performer. He first attracted public attention when he was filmed at age 10 onstage at RuPaul's DragCon 2017. The infamous host referred to the boy as "this gorgeous little queen."

The child subsequently appeared on Good Morning America and accepted engagements dancing in gay bars. He was filmed dancing in both New York and San Francisco as men threw money at him.

Desmond also appeared on a YouTube talk show hosted by Michael Alig, a 1990s New York dance club personality who spent almost 17 years in prison for manslaughter after the violent death and dismemberment of a drug dealer named Andre Melendez.

In the video interview over their heads was a painting of a cartoon child skipping rope over the word 'Rohypnol.' Rohypnol is a well-known date rape drug often used to incapacitate victims marked for sexual assault.

This is who Converse wants us to endorse as a role model, enticing youth to buy their shoes.

Corporate Bandwagon:

The popular home furnishings chain IKEA has announced that it will be hoisting the rainbow flag at its stores nationwide beginning June 1 in observance of Pride Month, and will also sell rainbow reusable shopping bags that will benefit the homosexual advocacy group Human Rights Campaign Foundation (HRCF).

Gap has launched a "Love All Ways" campaign and will donate 15 percent of its proceeds from its pride collection to the UN Free & Equal initiative. Footwear companies Adidas, Reebok, Ugg and Nike have all announced their 2019 rainbow-themed collection, and mouthwash brand Listerine made its bottle labels in rainbow stripes for the month of June.

Disney has also rolled out additional rainbow product, and Starbucks is selling a rainbow "love" tumbler for Pride Month.

Target department stores not only are offering clothing and accessories celebrating the gay lifestyle to adults and children, but the company has also pledged to donate to a nonprofit that trains students and teachers in LGBT politics and advocacy.

On Target's official website, it has several pages dedicated to merchandise that features the rainbow gay pride flag as well as messages intended to instill pride in the LGBT lifestyle. In addition, Target proclaims that it is donating $100,000 to GLSEN, the Gay, Lesbian & Straight Education Network.

Coincidentally, Target chief marketing officer Rick Gomez also serves on GLSEN's board of directors.

GLSEN provides training and resources to LGBTQ activists on school campuses while also advocating the homosexual cause in the political sphere. According to its website, "We accomplish our goals by working in hallways across the country -- from Congress and the Department of Education to schools and district offices in your community -- to improve school climate and champion LGBT issues in K-12 education".

Besides Target, major donors to GLSEN include Hollister, Walt Disney, JP Morgan Chase and Co., HBO, Delta Airlines, NBA, McDonald's, AT&T, Morgan Stanley, Gucci, Bloomberg, and Colgate-Palmolive. Through its board members, GLSEN also maintains a relationship with the largest teachers union in the United States, the National Education Association.

In his book "Becoming Visible: A Reader in Gay and Lesbian History for High School Students," founder and former president of GLSEN, Kevin Jennings wrote, "Some historians trace the development of homophobia in the West from the time when Christianity was adopted by the Romans. ... Whether homophobia began in the late Roman Empire because of the introduction of Christianity or became widespread in the late Middle Ages for political reasons, one thing remains clear: Biblical scriptures were used to justify persecution of those who loved members of their own sex."

Corporate America has made their choice clear. By normalizing these lifestyles, those who hold fast to God's truth that there are only two genders or that marriage is between a man and a woman are increasingly viewed as hateful, intolerant bigots. Only a horrible person would have a problem with this heartwarming moment between a transgender "man" and her father shaving for the first time, right?

Corporate America is now using their positions of influence and power to spread this ideology at every possible opportunity. Whereas in the past a boycott of certain corporations might have worked, the ideological root is too deep and too widespread.

We can still make our voices heard but the realization that this is not our home becomes more evident every day. Our personal responsibility to love God and love our neighbor is our best counter to a society that has chosen to identify with and celebrate the abominations in history for which God brought severe judgment.

"Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush. Therefore, they shall fall among them that fall; at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD." (Jeremiah 6.15)

Judgment is coming.

